Cell Phones

We live in a marvelous age. Communication is faster than ever in man's history, and so it is that the cell phone came into being. Now though people are oceans apart, they are just seconds away, thanks to this ingenious device. As with any invention, there are benefits and hazards involved.

How many accidents and deaths are due to the use of cell phones while driving is anybody's guess. But many states are recognizing the dangers and have outlawed the use of the cell phone while driving.

The case of the drunken driver and the use of cell phones are similar in nature. The drunken driver knows it is hazardous to drive while intoxicated, and while he is sober he can make a conscious effort to avoid committing this act. The owner of a cell phone can shut his phone off before entering his vehicle, and thus avoid answering the phone while driving. Also, if he or she has a pressing need to call someone on business or on a personal note, they can do it in their parked car. Now there is a novel idea!

Remember, the life you save may be your own!
